NEWS OF THE LAW SCHOOL

The Law School anticipates the largest enrollment in its recent history when the Fall Semester begins in September.

The only faculty or curricular change for the forthcoming session is that John M. McFall, Esq., of the Baltimore Bar, formerly of the part-time faculty, has resumed teaching and will conduct the Evening Division course in Mortgages during the First Semester.

The former Practice Court Room, on the Third Floor of the Law School building, has been converted for use for other purposes. Three offices, for faculty and Law Review staff, have been partitioned off on the East side of it, and the West side of it will be used by the School's secretaries and as a working library room for the faculty and the Law Review Board. Duplicate sets of the most essential books have been shelved in the new quarters.

The Practice Court bench and argument tables have been moved to the Auditorium on the First Floor, and sessions of the Practice Court will hereafter be held there.

Dean Roger Howell, who is one of the Maryland Commissioners on Uniform State Laws, attended the National Conference of that body, held at Seattle, Washington, in early September, in advance of and in conjunction with the Annual Meeting of the American Bar Association.
