On March 12-13, 1999, the School of Law and the Maryland Law Review will host a major conference and symposium at Westminster Hall that revisits the landmark Supreme Court decision of Gideon v. Wainwright: “Gideon: 36 Years Later—Is the Trumpet Still Sounding?” Keynote speakers will include Anthony Lewis, New York Times columnist, author of Gideon’s Trumpet and Harvard lecturer, and Abe Krash, partner at Arnold & Porter, who helped prepare Gideon’s Supreme Court brief. Following the keynote speakers, panel discussions are scheduled on the modern-day impact of Gideon. Panelists include professors Steven Bright, Brian Stevenson and Kim Taylor-Thompson. The Maryland Law Review will publish a symposium issue consisting of articles written by the conference panelists and a transcript of the keynote speakers’ remarks. For more information, contact Joseph Key or Abby Ross, Maryland Law Review, at 410-706-7414 or Professor Douglas L. Colbert at 410-706-0683.
