LEVIN PRIZE, for that student who contributed most to the School of Law during the year, Richard E. Lovell.

Annual Honor Case — The Honor Case of the Practice Court was argued on Monday, April 27, at the Law School Auditorium before a panel of judges consisting of: Hon. William L. Henderson of the Court of Appeals, as Chief Judge; and, as Associate Judges, Hon. Roszel C. Thomsen, Chief Judge, United States District Court for the District of Maryland and Hon. John T. Tucker, of the Supreme Bench of Baltimore City. Students selected from all seniors participating in Practice Court to argue the case were Robert Lazzaro and Joseph M. Roulhac for the appellants, and Robert E. Farnell, III, and Charles Allan Herndon for the appellees on the issue of whether a trial court of Baltimore City had erred in allowing counsel fees, alimony pendente lite, and permanent alimony as incident to a divorce granted to a woman on her petition that her marriage was bigamous because of her husband's misrepresentation that he had secured a divorce from a previous spouse. The appellants won, 2-1, on the law, and the W. CALVIN CHESNUT ADVOCACY AWARD for the best oral presentation (established in honor of Judge Chesnut by his former law clerks) was unanimously awarded to Mr. Roulhac, who is also Assistant Casenote Editor of the REVIEW.

Lectures on Practical Legal Education — Student Bar Association — During the school year, the Student Bar Association, in cooperation with the Junior Bar Association of Baltimore City, and under the faculty supervision of William P.
