EDITORS' NOTE

In June 1978 Laurence M. Jones retired as Professor of Law at the University of Maryland School of Law. His work with the Estates and Trusts Section of the Maryland State Bar Association, his writings in the field of property law and, of course, his thirty-six years of teaching at the University made a lasting contribution to Maryland law and lawyers. We offer this issue as a tribute to his work and extend our best wishes for a long and enjoyable retirement.

The Recent Decision in this issue was contributed by Deborah L. Robinson.
