To the Reader:

This year the Maryland Law Review has broadened the scope of its annual Survey to include Notes on recent decisions by the United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit and recent developments from the Maryland General Assembly—in addition to the traditional review of recent decisions by the Maryland Court of Appeals. Our intention is to offer Law Review's readership a more comprehensive overview of legal developments affecting the region.

The study and practice of law requires consideration of developments taking place at both the federal and state level. These developments occur, moreover, within legislative, administrative, and judicial rule-making fora, as well as in the state's highest court. This more comprehensive Survey breaks new and important ground for Law Review in its ongoing effort to improve the quality and breadth of its legal scholarship. An expanded Survey issue offers the unique occasion to reinforce Law Review's role in the study and practice of law not only in Maryland but throughout the Mid-Atlantic Region. We are very interested in your opinion of the expanded scope of the Survey and invite you to contact us with your comments.
