The following represents just a sampling of the myriad activities of our law school community—highlighting a diverse range of leadership in scholarship, teaching, and public service.

José Bahamonde-González served as vice president of the National Association for Law Placement. He presented "Diversifying Your Law School Career Services or Legal Recruiting Departments: A Call to Action" at the 2005 NALP Conference, Chicago, IL (April 2005), and "Implementing Diversity Initiatives at the Partner Level: Hiring Laterals and Recruiting Mentors" at the New York City Legal Recruiters Association, New York, NY (June 2005).

Irving Breitowitz presented "Cloning and Stem Cell Research: The Limits of Science," at the Jerusalem Institute of Halacha and Medicine in Potomac, MD (January 27, 2005).

Christopher Brown was presented the Women's Law Center of Maryland's Dorothy Beaty Award (2004) (October 26, 2004).

Douglas Colbert published op-ed articles "Give Prosecutors Power to Charge" (May 9, 2005) and "Bowing to Bail Bondsmen" (June 12, 2004) in the Baltimore Sun. He presented "Punishment without Trial" at the Law and Society Conference in Chicago and "Supervising Independent Student Work" at the AALS Conference on Clinical Legal Education (June 2004). He participated in a symposium at the Maryland State Bar Association meeting entitled "Pretial Release, Bail . . . Or Jail." He was selected as the initial recipient of the Maryland State Bar Association Correctional Reform Section Paul J. Davis Recognition Award.

Publications, Presentations, and Honors

Immune Programs,” 8 Journal of Health Care Law & Policy 7 (2005). He both co-organized and spoke at “Terrorism and Trauma: a Transatlantic Perspective,” a conference held at the University of Maryland, Baltimore, MD (September 20, 2004). Additionally, he was a presenter at the Cyril H. Wecht Institute of Forensic Science and Law & Duquesne University School of Law National Symposium: “Tracking Terrorism in the 21st Century,” held in Pittsburgh, PA (October 21-23, 2004), and at the “Law & Terrorism Conference 2005,” sponsored by the United States Military Academy at West Point (April 13-15, 2005).

Deborah Hellman will publish “What Money Can and Cannot Buy” in The Good Society, (forthcoming 2005). She presented “It’s Not the Thought that Counts: An Argument Against the Moral Significance of Intentions to Wrongful Discrimination” at the UCLA Legal Theory Workshop and the Dartmouth College, Legal Theory Workshop. In addition, she was awarded a Fellowship at the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars for 2005-06.

Diane Hoffmann published “Dying in America: An Examination of Policies that Deter Adequate End of Life Care” (with Anita Tarzian), 33 Journal of Law, Medicine & Ethics (2005), and “Future Public Policy and Ethical Issues Facing the Agricultural and Microbial Genomics Sectors of the Biotechnology Industry” (with Lawrence Sung), 24 Biotechnology Law Report 10-28 (2005). She presented “Pain and the Law” at “Meeting Challenges in the Decades of Pain,” a conference sponsored by Partners for Understanding Pain in Washington, DC (September 17, 2004), and “Are We Impeding Hospice Care in Nursing Homes: Challenges, Opportunities and Strategies,” at the National Hospice and Palliative Care Organization’s Annual Management & Leadership Conference in Washington, DC (September 30, 2004). She was a panelist at a forum on medical malpractice and tort reform, sponsored by the Department of Health Policy & Management, Bloomberg School of Public Health, Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, MD (November 11, 2004). She was appointed to the Ethics Committee of the National Hospice and Palliative Care Organization (2005).

Paula Monopoli will publish “Drafting Attorneys as Fiduciaries: Fashioning an Optimal Ethical Rule for Conflicts of Interest,” in the 66 Pittsburgh Law Review (forthcoming 2005) and published “The Sway of the Swing Vote: Justice Sandra Day O’Connor and Her Influence on Issues of Race, Religion, and Gender and Class, Foreword,” 4 University of Maryland Law Journal of Race, Religion, Gender and Class 207 (2004). She was the recipient of the University of Maryland School of Law’s Outstanding Teacher of the Year Award in May 2004. Professor Monopoli was the moderator for the panel “Women as Academics and Scholars” at the “Women and the ‘New’ Corporate Governance Symposium” held at the law school in Baltimore, MD (April 8, 2005), and she gave a presentation entitled “Gender and the Legal Profession” at the National Association of Law Placement’s Annual Conference in Chicago, IL (April 20, 2005).

Robert Percival was named the Robert F. Stanton Professor of Law. He presented “Environmental Justice: A Comparative Perspective,” at a conference “Comparative Climate Change Policy, National Allocation Plans and Emissions Trading,” Schloss Leopoldsken, held in Salzburg, Austria.

Michael Pinard published “Broadening the Holistic Mindset: Incorporating Collateral Consequences and Reentry into Criminal Defense Lawyering,” 31 Fordham Urban Law Journal 1067 (2004). He presented "Clinical Teaching," at the National People of Color Conference held at George Washington University in Washington, DC (October 8, 2004); "An Integrated Perspective of the Collateral Consequences of Criminal Convictions and the Reentry of Ex-Offenders," as part of a Faculty Colloquium held at Seton Hall University School of Law, Newark, NJ (November 12, 2004); and he was a facilitator at "Defining Community Defense and Holistic Advocacy," held as part of the Community-Oriented Defender Network Meeting, Brennan Center for Justice, New York, NY (March 22, 2005).

Peter Quint was a commentator on “Stories of Peoplehood,” by Rogers Smith at a Colloquium sponsored by the University of Maryland School of Law, Institute for Constitutional Studies and George Washington School of Law held in Baltimore, MD (October 13, 2004). He was a moderator at a panel on “South Africa: Constitution Building,” held at the Annual Meeting of American Society of Comparative Law, University of Michigan Law School in Ann Arbor, MI (October 23, 2004). He presented "’Enemy Combatants and the Rule of Law: Three Recent Cases," at the School of International Studies, Jawaharlal Nehru University, New Delhi, India (December 11, 2004), and "‘The Most Extraordinarily Powerful Court of Law the World Has Ever Known’-Judicial Review in Germany and the United States," at the Indian Law Institute, New Delhi, India (December 16, 2004) as well as at the Constitutional Law Schmooze held at the University of Maryland School of Law, Baltimore, MD (March 5, 2005).

Frederic Smalkin presented “The Interstate Commerce Clause” and “The American Legal System from the Perspective of Emerging Nations,” at the University of Redlands, Redlands, CA (October 21, 2004).

Robert Suggs will publish “Poisoning the Well: Law & Economics and Racial Inequality,” Hastings Law Journal (forthcoming 2005), and presented on this topic at the 8th Annual Conference of the Association for the Study of Law, Culture, and the Humanities, Austin, TX (March 11, 2005). He also presented “The Invisible Man in Law and Economics,” at Wake Forest University School of Law, Winston-Salem, NC (March 16, 2005) and at the Midwest People of Color Legal Scholarship Conference at Notre Dame Law School (April 8, 2005).

Roger Wolf was presented the "Maryland Leadership in Law Award," The Daily Record, The Scottish Rite (November 12, 2004).

Gordon Young was appointed the Marbury Research Professor of Law.
Again this year, the law school has attracted a fine slate of professors, increasing its range of expertise in several areas, from intellectual property and environmental law to international criminal justice.

Kelly A. Casey
Beginning this fall, Kelly A. Casey joins the law school's growing Intellectual Property Program as an assistant professor of law. She will teach International Intellectual Property and Patent Law.

Casey came to Maryland Law from the University of Georgia School of Law, where she held a visiting faculty position. Casey received a BS with highest honors from Georgia Tech and a JD, summa cum laude, from the University of Georgia School of Law, where she graduated first in her class. While in law school she served on the Georgia Law Review and was inducted into the Order of the Coif. After graduation, Casey clerked for Judge J.L. Edmondson of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit and Judge William C. Bryson of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit.

Casey honed her expertise in intellectual property law at the Atlanta office of Finnegan, Henderson, Farabow, Garrett & Dunner, a 300-lawyer firm that specializes in IP. While at the firm, she focused primarily on appellate litigation of intellectual property matters before the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit.

In talking about her move to the School of Law, she says, "I was attracted to Maryland Law by its strong tradition of striking the important balance between teaching—both classroom and clinical—and scholarly pursuits. The law faculty is composed of highly talented and dedicated scholars who have the privilege of working with bright, engaged students who are our future attorneys, judges, public interest advocates, government and business leaders, and scholars." Casey adds that she was particularly impressed by Maryland's Intellectual Property Law Program, which thoughtfully and strategically combines both theory and practical skills to introduce students to this exciting area of law. Casey's research interests relate to intellectual property law, with an emphasis on patent law.

Kerry Rodgers
Kerry Rodgers joins the University of Maryland School of Law faculty as a visiting associate professor of law to teach the Environmental Law Clinic during the 2005-2006 academic year. Rodgers earned a JD from New York University School of Law, where she served as senior articles editor of the New York University Environmental Law Journal. Prior to attending law school, she earned an MES in Environmental Studies from the Yale University School of Forestry & Environmental Studies and an AB in Biology from Brown University.

Rodgers brings extensive experience practicing environmental law to the law school. Most recently, she served in the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's Office of General Counsel in Washington, D.C. Her practice as the acting assistant general counsel for Clean Air Act Title V Permits and attorney-advisor involved counseling and litigation in the areas of Clean Air Act permits and the regulation of air toxins. Rodgers previously was an associate at the law firm of Dewey Ballantine LLP in New York, where she practiced environmental law for five years. She was selected to receive a 1995-1996 Morris K. Udall Congressional Fellowship in the Office of Technology Assessment of the U.S. Congress.

While the main reason Rodgers decided to come to UM Law was its "exciting Environmental Law Program," she says, "I also am impressed by the law school's commitment to public service, as reflected by its Clinical Law Program and the interdisciplinary approach of the curriculum. Through the Environmental Law Clinic, I hope to share my experience practicing environmental law with students who are enthusiastic about the field."

Chandra Lekha Sriram
Chandra Lekha Sriram joins the School of Law during the fall 2005 semester as a visiting associate professor of law. She will teach International Human Rights and International Law. Since September 2003, Dr. Sriram has been a lecturer in the School of International Relations at the University of St. Andrews in Scotland.

She is author of various books and journal articles on international relations, international law, human rights and conflict prevention and post-conflict peace-building. Two of her most recent books/monographs include, Globalizing Justice For Mass Atrocities: A Revolution In Accountability (Routledge, forthcoming 2005), and Confronting Past Human Rights Violations: Justice vs. Peace in Times of Transition (Frank Cass, 2004).

Her forthcoming research project examines the use of inclusion of non-state armed groups in governance and security structures as a tool of peace negotiations and peace-building. The study will examine efforts to negotiate with non-state armed groups in Sri Lanka, Sudan, and Colombia.

Dr. Sriram received a PhD from the Department of Politics at Princeton University and a JD from Boalt Hall School of Law at the University of California-Berkeley with an emphasis in international law.
A Legacy of Teaching, Scholarship, and Service

With a combined sixty-nine years of service, Professors Edward Tomlinson and Abraham Dash represent a remarkable legacy. Their promotion to emeritus status upon their respective retirements this year is a reflection of the remarkable contributions they have made to the life of the School of Law, to the academy, and to the bench and the bar.

Many students first encounter Professor Tomlinson as a careful critic of their legal writing assignments. As a tireless teacher of legal writing and analysis, Professor Tomlinson parsed the sentences of a generation of lawyers, teaching them not just to construct a sentence but to reason more clearly. Other students met him in contracts, criminal procedure, or in an advanced seminar in comparative law. Professor Tomlinson is the author of a score of articles, and he translated the French Penal Code of 1994 with a scholarly introduction. His articles have been cited in the work of the American Law Institute for their informative comparative analysis.

Professor Tomlinson's service to the school and to the larger community is extraordinary. He shaped the development of the school's educational program for years as chairman of the Curriculum Committee. His public service in Maryland includes the Governor's Death Penalty Advisory Committee. On the national level, he has been a director of the American Society of Comparative Law, and internationally, he is the American representative of the Association Henri Capitant des Amis de la Culture Juridique Francaise. Professor Tomlinson received his BA from Princeton in 1961, his MA from the University of Washington in 1962 and his LLB in 1965 from Harvard University. He joined the University of Maryland School of Law faculty in 1965, and was promoted to professor of law in 1971.

Students are most likely to meet Professor Dash in a large upper-level lecture course on legal profession, criminal procedure, or administrative law. He has received awards for his teaching, and has served as a positive role model for countless graduates of the law school now serving as lawyers and judges. Professor Dash has provided extraordinary service to the school as a member of the Administrative Committee, advisor to the Moot Court Board, and founder of the school's highly successful Trial Advocacy Team. Professor Dash has published several books and articles, principally for practicing lawyers and judges, and he has continued to update many of those books (the judges' bench books specifically) over the years.

Professor Dash's public service has also been extraordinary. He helped start the Law Related Education Program of the Maryland State Bar Association, which provides education to public school teachers on the legal system. Professor Dash is a member of several bars including, the U.S. Supreme Court, the U.S. Court of Appeals, Washington, D.C., the District of Columbia, and the Court of Military Appeals. Over the years, he has served as a consultant to several American Bar Association and Maryland Bar committees on criminal procedure and administrative law and to a national task force on organized crime.

Both professor Tomlinson and professor Dash will be the subject of tributes in upcoming issues of the Maryland Law Review.