A Warm Welcome

The School of Law is not only the first choice of many applicants but also is the first choice of many talented scholars and practitioners. A number of full-time visiting faculty accommodate a larger-than-usual entering class (see related story on page 2). From a pool brimming with gifted candidates, the very best have chosen to join us for a year or two.

Tanya Washington Brioche ’95 earned a juris doctor degree from the University of Maryland School of Law and a master’s of law degree from Harvard, where she was a research fellow in social justice and a clinical research fellow at the Criminal Justice Institute. Prior to attending Harvard, she was an associate at Piper & Marbury, LLP, with a practice in the toxic tort defense and commercial litigation departments. She teaches Contracts and LAWRII.

I. Michael Greenberger most recently served as principal deputy associate attorney general at the U.S. Department of Justice. Prior to that, he was director of the Division of Trading & Markets at the Commodity Futures Trading Commission and a partner at the Washington, D.C., law firm of Shea & Gardner. Greenberger graduated from the University of Pennsylvania Law School, where he served as editor-in-chief of the Law Review. He teaches Contracts, Trademarks & Unfair Competition and Constitutional Law.

Andrew D. Levy ’82 is a past chair of the Criminal Law and Practice Section of the Maryland State Bar Association and a member of both the National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers and the Association of Trial Lawyers of America. Levy graduated from the University of Maryland School of Law with honors in 1982. He is the co-editor of Appellate Practice for the Maryland Lawyer. An adjunct professor at the School of Law since 1987, he teaches Torts, LAWRI and Evidence.
Paula A. Monopoli is a professor of law at Southwestern University School of Law. As a visiting scholar at the School of Law during the 2000–2001 academic year, Monopoli taught Estates & Trusts and Estate Planning Seminar and was selected as the part-time teacher of the year. Monopoli has published widely on legal ethics, child advocacy and probate law and policy and is the founder and editor of PortiaLaw.com, a Web site for women lawyers and law students. Monopoli received her juris doctor degree from the University of Virginia School of Law. She teaches Property and Estates & Trusts.

Mairi N. Morrison will receive her doctorate in jurisprudence from Oxford University this fall. While at Oxford, she was a tutor for courses in jurisprudence, comparative constitutional law and European community law. From 1993 to 1996, Morrison taught at St. Thomas University School of Law in Miami, Fla. She is a 1992 graduate of the University of Baltimore School of Law, from which she received several academic awards. She has published law review articles on family law and critical race feminism. Morrison teaches LAWR I, Criminal Law and LAWR II.

Suzanne Sangree has been a visiting scholar at the University of Maryland School of Law and a visiting assistant professor at Washington College of Law, American University, where she has taught Family Law, Conflict of Laws and Feminist Jurisprudence. She has published law review articles on gender discrimination in athletics, sexual harassment and the First Amendment, and control of childbearing by HIV-positive women. From 1999 to 2001, she served as career clerk for the Hon. Andre M. Davis ’78, of the U.S. District Court for the District of Maryland. Sangree received her master's of law degree from Harvard University Law School and her juris doctor degree from City University of New York Law School. She teaches LAWR I, Civil Procedure and Constitutional Law.

Virgil Wiebe was an advocacy fellow at the Center for Applied Legal Studies at Georgetown University Law Center from 1999 to 2001. Prior to that, he practiced law as director of Immigration Services and supervising attorney at Interfaith Community Services in New York City. Wiebe received his master's of law degree in advocacy from Georgetown University Law Center and his juris doctor degree from New York University School of Law, where he was a Root-Tilden-Snow Public Interest Law Scholar and an editor of the Journal of International Law & Politics. He has published articles on international humanitarian law and on immigration law and policy. He directs the Immigration Law Clinic and teaches Criminal Law.

Michael P. Van Alstine is professor of law at the University of Cincinnati College of Law, where he has received the Goldman Prize for Excellence in Teaching four times during the past five years. He has published widely in the areas of contracts, commercial law and international commercial transactions. Van Alstine received his juris doctor degree from George Washington University School of Law and both his doctor of laws and his master's of comparative law degrees summa cum laude from the University of Bonn, Germany. He teaches Contracts, Sales & Payment Systems, Secured Transactions & Negotiability and Introduction to International Law.