The class of 1949 celebrated at the Maryland Club in Baltimore.

Classmates from 1959 welcome one another after 35 years.

Co-chairs Dick Duden, Dan Schmitt and Bruce Friedman (this year's Alumni Association president) present the class of 1984 reunion gift to Dean Gifford.

Steve Creskoff and Peter Gunst (not pictured) co-chaired the 25th reunion for the class of 1969.

Dean Gifford joins members of the class of 1949 while accepting their reunion gift.
Golden Grads Luncheon
More than 20 graduates from the class of 1949 or earlier attended the biannual Golden Grads luncheon at the School of Law in November. The "Thanksgiving" celebration, with a full-course turkey dinner, attracted many first-time attendees, who vowed to return with others.

The event was a delightful opportunity to hear stories of what the School of Law was like in its early days. Dean Gifford brought the group up to date on recent changes and was particularly moved by the short biographies each alumnus gave after lunch.

Judge Meyer Cardin '29 and Isaac Hecht '38, founding members of the Golden Grads, each spoke of the importance of getting involved in some capacity with the School of Law. If you graduated before 1950, please watch for your invitation to the next Golden Grads luncheon this spring.

Classmates from 1984 show what reunions are all about.

Lynne Battaglia '74 and Frank Burch '74 chat with Dean Donald Gifford.

Westminster Hall was festively decorated for the 1994 reunion celebration.

Classmates from 1979 included Judge Ann Harrington, Judy Warranch and Frank Burch, chairman of the School of Law's Board of Visitors.

Hersh Stein, Arnold Fleischmann, George Sparks and Bill Goldstein are all members of the class of 1954.

The class of 1989 was well represented at the reunions.

Three 1989 graduates catch up on what's happened over the past five years.

Ed Steffy, Bob Watts and Judge Jim Bundy celebrate their 45th reunion.
